

Soil improvement Systems Placement

The compost area needs to be close to the main growing area to be accessible for adding waste to and for maintenance. As it's not the prettiest element in a garden, having it around the side of the greenhouse is a good option. A paved path may be necessary at some point but that can happen later down the line.

When I came to drawing up the design, I realised that there was a better place for the composting systems, near the greenhouse door where a path already exists - this would make the composting system accessible straight away.
